coming growing season. But,
optimist or pessimist, it's easy to say don't, so here are 18 don't for gardening in

13 don't for gardening in 1979.

1. Don't try to grow vegetables on a lot that is too poor to make a good growth of weeds or grass. Good soils make for good gardens.

2. Don't spade, plow, or cultivate soil that is too wet. Working on puddling wet soils will destroy soil structure for most of the summer. This causes poor plant growth and difficult cultivation.

3. Don't apply too much lime. A soil test is the only method of determing how much lime your garden needs.

method of determing now much lime your garden needs.

John Trun the rows up and down a slope. Running the row parallel with the slope conserves moisture and prevents erosion from cocuring.

5. Don't plant seeds, roots, or tubers too deeply. The rule of thumb for planting depth is 4 to 6 times the diameter of the seeds too thickly. Most crops do best with adequate space and overseeding means more thinning work.

7. Don't guess' at the amounts of fertilizer to apply per unit area of land. Although there are safety limits in recommended interest of the seeds of

E. Don't let fertilizer come in contact with the seeds or plants. Mix it with the soil before planting.

9. Don't cultivate deeply enough to injure the shallow roots of the vegetables. Cultivations are basically for weed control and crusting and need not be deep. Don't let the weeds get big before destroying them. Staying ahead of weeds is the secret to gardening success.

years. The state is trying to diminish the use of bonding, in order to reduce future debt service. The new revenues would support additional bonding, but at significantly reduced levels compared to recent years. The total bonding level proposed would be $400 million over the four-year period, starting at $130 million in the first year and declining to $70 million, less than half of recent year bonding levels.

All of the new revenues raised under this recommendation would be used solely for road construction and maintenance. The revenues would permit the state to match all available regular and discretionary federal aid, maintenance. The revenues would permit the state to match all available regular and discretionary federal aid, which totals $580 million per year.

The average amount that a typical motorist would pay over the next four years under this proposal is $20 per year. The specific amount any individual motorist would pay under this proposal depends directly on how much he or she uses the highway system, the size of the automobile and the car's fuel efficiency.

These measures would provide an $900 million program in FY 80 and a $900 million program in FY 80 and a $900 million average annual program for the four years. At this level, the following would occur over the next four years:

1. Routine maintenance activities would be improved. Snow removal cycle times could be significantly shortened, and additional funds would allow more permanent pothole patching rather than the temporary patching which is now being carried out.

2. Repairs on the state highway system would keep near with the deficient bridges.

4. The existing backlog of 3,000 miles of rough and-or narrow pavements, 200 inadequate bridges, and clogged intersections on the state highway system would be reduced by 20 percent. This translates into widening or resurfacing 600 miles of roads, replacing or rehabilitating 100 bridges, and making major safety improvements at 100 intersections.

5. The downstate Interstate system would be completed. In addition, 240 miles of worn-out Interstate pavement would be reconstructed.

6. Supplemental freeway routes

6. Supplemental freeway routes currently under construction would be completed to usable segments, although the major emphasis of the program would be on maintaining the Work could start in other high-priority supplemental freeway to modern two-lane or four-lane modified freeway status. In all, 200 miles of new supplemental freeways would be initiated or completed.

7. Local governments would receive an additional $350 million in state motor fuel tax assistance to cut into the enormous backlog of work on the 116,000-mile. local roads and street system. This additional revenue could

Summary of the state-county-township-city road funding dilemma outlined in Grantic City yesterday by Dale Klohr, the state's District Eight fighway engineer—Highway financing in Illinois is at a decision point. There are two basic choices: slash the highway program or change Illinois' 10-year-old motor fuel tax and motor vehicle fee structure.

Factors which led to this situation include the growing age and needs of the road and street system, the rising costs to meet those needs, and costs to meet those needs, and tagnating revenue growth from the ting tax structure

Disting tax structure.

1. Growing needs — More than two thirds of Illinois 133,000-mile highway system was built before World War II.

Thousands of miles of roads and hundreds of bridges are in urgent need of repair, a need that has been accelerated by the effects of three punishing winters. If these needs are not addressed soon, repair costs could quadruple once damage requires costly sub-base repair in addition to simple resurfacing.

quadruple once damage requires costly sub-base repair in addition to simple resurfacing.

2. Rising costs — Highway construction prices are 160 percent higher than 10 years ago, when the current statewide fuel tax and vehicle registration fees were established. In 1978 alone, the cost of highway work increased 25 percent.

3. Stagnating revenues — The growth rate of state revenue sources (motor fuel taxes and motor vehicle registration fees) has dropped significantly due to smaller and more legistration fees) has dropped significantly due to smaller and more ulcel-efficient cars and is projected to level off in the next four years.

Almost every state is facing this same situation. Many have already moved to generate more highway revenues. A few states, such as Pennsylvania, hive chosen not to increase user fees, with the result that their road programs have come to a their road programs have come to a standstill.

Illinois has managed to sponsor one of the nation's largest road programs despite its lower-than-average highway user fees. This has been made possible by, substantially increased federal by substantially increased federal funding, continued bonding, and general belt-tightening with respect to the department's internal operations. These three measures have been vigorously pursued, but the state is fast approaching the limits of what can be expected.

These measures have made it possible to postpone the need to restructure highway revenues and have cut in half the size of the overall increase needed now.

Unless Illinois' current motor fuel tax and motor vehicle fee structure are changed by the General Assembly this spring, however, the state road program will fall dramatically over the next four years, dropping from the fiscal year 1979 (July 1978-June 1979) isseal year 1979 (July 1978-June 1979) level of $666 million to an average annual level of only $300 million over the next four years.

Under these constraints, the number of badly deteriorated roads and bridges — a number already unacceptably high — will increase by 500 miles and 70 bridges each year on the state highway system alone.

Completion of the Interstate system will be stretched out over 10 years, and work on the Supplemental Freeway system will come to a virtual standstill. Construction-induced jobs will drop onstruction-induced jobs will d

Maintenance activities such as snow removal and pothole filling will be cut back. Finally, over $1.4 billion (approximately $200 per driver) in federal funds earmarked for Illinois highways and bridges will be lost over e next four years to other states due the lack of state matching funds.

Changes are needed in the 10-year-old highway user fee structure to take advantage of the available federal funds and to keep our roads in a condition which will support the economic well-being and safety of the people of Illinois. Four steps are recommended:

recommended:

A. Motor fuel tax — Increase the motor fuel tax from 7.5 cents per gallon to 9 cents ber gallon, and shift the tax to a variable rate, limiting its growth to the growth rate of personal income. Through this change, local governments would receive about $90 million per year in additional revenue and the State Road Fund would receive about $50 million per year.

B. Motor vehicle registration fees

Then, carefully prepared questions were asked by key board members who were already predisposed to favor Barton, no matter what he did.

one of those questions came from Board Member Bill Little, chairman of the Finance Committee, whose mother, a laready past retirement age, works in Barton's office.

The question concerned the certificate of error issued by Barton to the Venture store in Alton — and Barton just happened to have the so-called substantiating evidence concerning the store.

This issue began as a problem of unfair treatment of the eastern townships, caused by arbitrarily high multipliers.

As the committee did further research, we found the taxpayers in the western townships were also hurt by Barton's assessing. The western townships lost more than $20 million in a loss of revenue that could have helped in the Venice school system, kept Granite City schools open, and prevented the mass firing of teachers in Alton. teachers in Alton

Barton tried to make the Organizing Committee's charges look like a personal vedetta on the part of committee spokesman Alan Libbra stemming from an incident concerning Libbra's father years ago.

We call this low and despicable behavior of a drowning man grasping at straws.

According to Stegemeier, this is the difference between winning "I feel that most teams beat themselves, especially in high school. You don't find both teams playing exceptional games very often," said Stegemeier.

So the Steelers attempt to develop an ability to avoid success. "We take some of our batting practice with men on base," "You have to be imaginative to see the situation, but when they get into a game you can't be hollering at them. They just have to react."

Tournament darts a growing sport

Darts — a child's game, right? You throw a pointed projectile at a disk mounted on a wall and if you hit the center ring, you win.

All of the above is definately not the way the old English pub game is viewed by those who frequent Hanlon's tavern in downtown Granite City. For them, the game is a very serious business, a sport that rivals any in the competitiveness of its participants.

When you walk into the neighborhood style tavern, you walk into the neighborhood style tavern, you what usually goes on it audit there is more going on than what usually goes on its must there is more going on than You notice further that there are a lot of women and children around. Most have their attention turned in the direction of one of the two dart boards which are mounted at each end of the building. There are competitions going on this Monday evening, in two divisions.

Fortunately for the players, absolute quiet is not necessary. Most learned their skill in just such a tavern, remember of the start of the start

The dart craze in the Quad-Cities is relatively new and growing. As more and more people, both men and women, get involved, the old English pastime is enjoying a new popularity in this area.

Be you an expert or a casual observer, you will find that the sport of tournament darts is quite an enjoyable way to spend an evening.

And if it continues to grow in the future as it is now, those down at Hanlon's — wearing their colors and carrying collectively hundreds of dollars worth of the feathered projectiles — will be among those playing world-competition.

Thompson also announced operations at the Illinois Soldiers' and Sailors' Children's School in Normal. Due to the deteriorating condition of the facility and the high cost of serving children there, the departicular of the soldiers o ment believes adolescents at Normal can be better served through purchase of in-stitutional and group home care from private agencies.

Plans are under way to establish two new programs for troubled adolescents in Cook County, including a 24-hour emergency sheller care facility for runaways, victims of abuse and neglect and others in need of emergency care.

The department will continue to emphasize its transitional day care program administered in Compartment of Public Aid. The program started this year, provides day care for 1,100 children of former public aid recipients who are employed but unable to afford adequate day care. The $1.4 million recommended in the FY 80 budget for this program is less than half the amount it would cast upublic assistance, Thompson asserted.

day, April 29.

"Our go-getters are doing great but we want to contact every business and as many individuals as possible tin order to make this auction the success it should be;" she said. "It need more volunteers, especially in the Alton area, and many more donations."

Proceeds from the auction will help continue Channel 9's "alternative programming."

"We feel strongly that everyone benefits from the auction's success," she said. "The donor receives valuable advertising exposure during prime television time; the bidder has the fun of viewing the auction and bidding on desired items — and may obtain them at bargain prices. And the entire bistate viewing audience continues to receive quality programs from our public television station."

Mrs. Hudson lives with her husband, teon, and two high school daughters, Brenda and Lila, in Granite City.

She is on the board of directors of Channel 9 and the board if the Illinois Association for the Deaf, and is a registered interpreter for the deaf. She is urging anyone interested in helping with the auction, by volunteering or donating, to call the auction office at 314-725-5575.

Flood insurance is urged

Mayor Paul Schuler this week urged citizens to protect themselves against potential spring flood damage by obtaining flood insurance now, since chances for increased spring flooding have risen due to the unusually heavy snow this winter.

"People should act quickly to protect their property against flood damage. It is important to remember that there is a five-day waiting period before coverage on flood inurance policies goes into effect," he noted.

Mayor Schuler pointed out. Mayor Schuler pointed out surrance can be sold by any insurance agent who sells property insurance. "The policy offers low-cost, federally-subsidized coverage against damage by Gooding.— for example, a single family homeowner can purchase a $10,000 policy on his home's contents for only $85 per Year.

The mayor said the purpose of the program is to provide information, advice and assistance to those who could be affected by flooding. Some of this advice is in the form as a self-help manual, "Ideas on Protecting Your House from Flood Damage." MAT MATSON SAYS

When a dealer is selling a lot of new cars from a facility with limited storage space, it's extremely important that the trade-in cars be merchandised and sold as rapidly cars be merchandised and sold as rapidly as possible. That's why we here at Granite Chrysler Plymouth have always been proud of our reputation for quality preowned cars at prices considerably below those of most other dealers. Here are typical examples of our everyday low
